Nuclear alliance of Polish billionaires

Two biggest Polish private entrepreneurs, Zygmunt Solorz and Michał Sołowow, decided to start a joint project the aim of which is to build a nuclear power plant in SMR technology (the so called Small Module Reactors). Entrepreneurs plan to build from four to six reactors with the output of 300 MW each.

Chemical company Synthos, controlled by Michał Sołowow, is an investor and technology provider under this project. In 2019, Synthos signed an agreement with GE Hitachi Nuclear Energy for implementation of a small module reactor (BWRX300 model), the first of which could be built in Poland by 2030.

Currently, ZE PAK joins the project. The investment is to be located on its premises, in Pałnów. ZE PAK is a complex of brown coal mines and power plants controlled by Zygmunt Solorz (who is at the same time the majority shareholder of Cyfrowy Polsat). The strategy of ZE PAK assumes moving away from generation of energy from coal by 2030 at the latest and obtaining it from renewable sources instead.
