Services will retain access to telecommunications data

The Ministry of Digitization has launched a public consultation on a draft law - the Electronic Communications Act, the main purpose of which is to transpose the European Electronic Communications Directive ("ECD") into national law. This is the second approach to the implementation of the Directive. The current draft does not include the changes that previously caused controversy, i.e. the obligation to give first place to public television channels in the scheduling of programs (the so-called "lex pilot") and the extension of the obligation to retain data on calls made by telecommunications companies to electronic communications companies.

However, the new draft extends the scope of data retention to include data that uniquely identifies a user on the network. In addition, it retains the provisions for increasing the maximum charges for telecommunications activities, but does not explicitly regulate the rules for amending subscriber contracts. In January, the Polish Office for Competition and Consumer Protection ("UOKiK") accused the cable network Vectra of using inflation clauses in its contracts with subscribers, on the basis of which the operator increased the price of services during the term of the contracts.

Comments on the bill can be submitted for two weeks.

New look for Plus and Polsat Box points of sale

The 170 joint sales points of the Plus network and the Polsat Box platform (Cyfrowy Polsat Group) have undergone a visual change.

In each of the joint Plus and Polsat Box sales outlets, customers can test devices and get acquainted with the offer of mobile, Internet, TV, SmartDOM combined services and Apple products (in selected locations).

E-signatures are supported at the outlets, and brochures and catalogs can be downloaded to the phone via QR code. Energy-saving elements have been used in the layout of the display.

This is the first stage of changes in the visualization of Plus and Polsat Box stores, which will include more outlets across the country in 2024.

In Play, 300 Mbps connection with Netflix from 50 PLN per month

Play has launched a new offer of fiber optic Internet with access to the Netflix platform and Play Now Internet TV for the price of a subscription (in a one-year contract).

The operator is offering its existing customers packages priced at PLN 50 (Internet up to 300 Mbps), PLN 60 (up to 600 Mbps), PLN 80 (up to 1 Gbps) and PLN 110 (up to 5 Gbps). The price is increased by PLN 5 per month for the router and PLN 1 for service activation.

New customers who are not yet using Play's services can purchase the above fiber optic Internet packages at a price 20 PLN higher than the price for existing customers.
