Paramount to acquire Warner Bros. Discovery. Agreement signed

Warner Bros. Discovery (WBD) and Paramount Skydance have signed a binding agreement under which Paramount will acquire WBD. The transaction is valued at approximately USD 110 billion, with completion planned for the third quarter of 2026. Both companies confirmed the signing of the agreement in official statements.

Under the terms of the transaction, if it is not completed by the end of September 2026, WBD shareholders will be entitled to receive USD 0.25 per share for each quarter of delay.

Completion of the transaction is still subject to approval by WBD shareholders (with a general meeting planned for the spring) as well as regulatory approvals, including in the United States (Department of Justice) and the European Union. In their statements, Paramount Skydance CEO David Ellison and WBD President and CEO David Zaslav emphasized that the goal of the merger is to combine complementary assets and increase value for viewers and shareholders.

Vectra launches a bundled offer with internet, television and a choice of four streaming services

Vectra has introduced a new bundled offer combining fiber-optic internet, television and access to one of four streaming services to choose from.

The package for new customers includes internet speeds of up to 300 Mb/s, television with 73 channels, including TVP, Polsat and TVN, as well as access to Netflix (Basic plan), Disney+ (Standard), HBO Max (Standard) or Canal+ Series and Movies. The contract is signed for 23 months, with prices starting at PLN 89.99 per month, plus an additional modem rental fee of PLN 4.99. Variants with faster internet speeds and broader channel line-ups are also available.

Existing Vectra customers can take advantage of promotional bundles that include two streaming services, saving PLN 10 per month compared with purchasing the services separately. For example, the Canal+ Series and Movies package with Netflix costs PLN 52.99 per month, while Netflix with Disney+ is priced at PLN 57.99 per month.

The offer is available until the end of April.

Starlink Mobile and V2 satellites will transform mobile connectivity

SpaceX is developing the Starlink Mobile service, previously known as Direct to Cell, which is intended to enable direct connectivity between standard smartphones and satellites in areas without terrestrial network coverage, without the need for additional antennas or terminals. A key role is played by second-generation Starlink satellites (V2), which offer many times higher performance and capacity than earlier designs. This is expected to enable full broadband connectivity, including not only SMS and emergency calls, but also data transmission, voice calls, video calls and streaming.

SpaceX describes the project as a step toward building a space-based 5G network operating on standards compatible with terrestrial LTE and 5G networks. Currently, several hundred satellites supporting mobile connectivity are already operating in orbit, and until the full-scale V2 satellites are deployed, the company is using smaller V2 Mini versions launched aboard Falcon 9 rockets.

In Europe, Starlink Mobile is to be developed in cooperation with T-Mobile, part of the Deutsche Telekom Group, as a complement to existing mobile infrastructure and a way to eliminate so-called coverage white spots. The project is still at an early stage. The commercial launch of the full service is planned for 2028 and will enable seamless handover of the signal between terrestrial base stations and satellites in orbit.

TV without a decoder: nearly 200 online channels on Polsat Box Go

23 channels from TVN Warner Bros. Discovery and TVP join the extensive offering of sports, news, movies, and series

Polsat Box Go is a service that combines streaming and television. Starting March 10, the offer will be further enhanced with 23 TV stations, this time from TVP and TVN Warner Bros. Discovery. Among the new additions are: TVN24, TVN24 BiS, TVN7, TVN Style, TVN Turbo, TVN Fabuła, TVP Info, TVP Sport, and TVP Seriale. Now, viewers on Polsat Box Go can watch almost 200 channels in total and thousands of hours of movies, series, and programs from the VOD library. All they need is the internet – no decoder and no long-term commitments.

*„We are the only such comprehensive TV and streaming service. Viewers are now searching online not only for movies or series—they want to watch everything, including TV channels, sports, and news. Polsat Box Go is a modern streaming service that combines TV without a decoder with the freedom to watch thousands of hours of VOD, without long-term commitments. You're online and simply watch whatever you want. It's easy and convenient”, says Maciej Stec, Vice President of the Management Board for Strategy at Cyfrowy Polsat, Polsat Plus Group.
